

ABSTRACT

Scripts describing procedures usually used by attackers in a programming language are pre-accumulated. A script 5 selected by the user out of the accumulated scripts is executed, which calls a plugin with logic implemented for attacking each securityhole. This plugin is executed on a test target computer, which allows removing the necessity of the user having security knowledge about such as input/output relationship between test 10 execution units.